FALLING STARS

NE night when everything very still, and even the best frogs and the crickets were to making any noise, a see little fairy went skipping over the great toward the path the moonlight as making. On and on went the little fairy to the very edge of the world And there, where real folks would have fallen off, the little fairy started to climb the moonboam path.

Up and up went the wee little fairy until after a long time she came to the old moon himself, smilling on the great world beneath him.

"What's the matter?" asked the moon. "You seem in a terrible burry, "I am," panted the wee little fairy, and she ran around to the old moon and she ran around to the old moon to make too bad. What are you going to do about it?"

"I don't know, I'm sure, that's why I came to you," and the wee little fairy and the wee little fairy and the very little fairy and she ran around to the old moon. "The same to you and the wee little fairy and she ran around to the old moon to fall a create the same to you." and the wee little fairy was a greated about it?"

"I don't know, I'm sure, that's why I came to you," and the wee little fairy seemed very much worried.
"You say you've tried everything?" MIPPING OVER THE GRASS asked the old moon, frowning so hard the moonbeam path went out.

"Everything." answered the fairy, "Even the Fairy Queen herself tried."

Just then a tiny star came hurrying past the moon.

"What are you frowning about?" the tiny star asked the moon.

"Come here and I'll tell you," the moon sald, and when the tiny star came to him he whispered into her ear.

"That's too bad," said the tiny star, pernaps I can help."
